Gridwealth Powers Up Hope with Solar Panel Donation to Habitat for Humanity Metro West/Greater Worcester

Local sustainable energy provider will fit two homes for families with solar panels, lowering their energy costs for decades to come.

Gridwealth, a leading developer, owner, and operator of clean energy solutions and provider of retail electricity, today announced a significant donation of solar panels and installation services to Habitat for Humanity MetroWest/Greater Worcester, which builds homes, communities, and hope for local families and veterans in 42 cities and towns in Middlesex and Worcester counties. This contribution will equip two newly built houses with sustainable, cost-saving solar power for decades, and has a market value of $40,000.

"To secure a sustainable and affordable future, local generation of electricity is key for every community," said Quincy Vale, chairman and president of Gridwealth.

"Collaborating with Habitat for Humanity gives us the opportunity to live our values and do our part to level the playing field, one family at a time, starting right here at home. While we don't normally do residential installations, it was worth deviating from our standard business offerings for this opportunity to lift up our local community, which we owe so much of our success to."

The donation aligns perfectly with Habitat for Humanity Metro West/Greater Worcester's mission to empower individuals and families to achieve the strength, stability, and self-reliance they need through shelter. With solar panels, the two veteran families will benefit from long term significant energy cost savings, allowing them to allocate more resources toward their well-being and financial security.

"Gridwealth's generous donation allows us to create homes for two veteran families with sustainable, reliable energy access," said Deborah Huegel, vice president of philanthropy of Habitat for Humanity MetroWest/Greater Worcester. "We're proud to partner with Gridwealth to make that a reality for these families. We build homes that are safe, affordable, and decent – and adding solar panels helps to ensure that all three of those features last for decades to come."

This collaboration marks the beginning of a promising partnership between Gridwealth and Habitat for Humanity MetroWest/Greater Worcester. Gridwealth is committed to supporting the organization's mission and looks forward to exploring further opportunities to empower local families and veterans through sustainable energy solutions.

About Gridwealth

Founded in 2013, Gridwealth is a fully integrated energy company that leverages its development, ownership, and control over solar and storage facilities to drive bottom-line benefits to its commercial & industrial customers. Gridwealth's products range from third-party provision of energy assets (solar-as-a-tenant), retail electricity supply, discounted utility credits from remote solar farms, and BTM energy management from BESS, together with services spanning from portfolio-level real estate reviews, asset offtake procurement and billing, renewable energy certificate brokerage, power purchase agreements (PPAs), and facility operation and maintenance. Gridwealth partners with commercial and industrial property owners, private companies, public entities, independent power producers, and retail electricity brokers to generate economic benefits and verifiable environmental gains. The company is expanding rapidly across the U.S. with involvement in over 150 projects and a plan to have 500 MW of operating solar assets in its portfolio by 2027. About Habitat for Humanity MetroWest/Great Worcester

Habitat for Humanity MetroWest/Greater Worcester partners with local families of all races, ethnicities, ages, faiths, and backgrounds whose housing situation is unsafe, too crowded, or otherwise unaffordable. They actively work to end racism and unconscious bias. Over 50% of their homes are owned by people of color, and over 75% are owned by single women.

Habitat homeowners help build their own homes alongside volunteers and pay an affordable mortgage. Through financial support, volunteering or adding a voice to support affordable housing, everyone can help families achieve the strength, stability and self-reliance they need to build better lives for themselves. With an affordable home, families are able to pay for healthy food, medicine, transportation and to save for their children's education. Through shelter, we empower.
